National Home Infusion Association President and CEO Wilson to Leave Organization

Alexandria, VA – (May 22, 2018) The National Home Infusion Association (NHIA), representing providers and suppliers of home and specialty infusion therapy, today announced that President and Chief Executive Officer Tyler Wilson will be leaving his position at the association, effective July 17, 2018. A search for his successor will begin immediately. In the interim, Wilson will work with the NHIA Board of Directors and staff leadership to develop a transition plan to ensure the important work of the association continues without interruption.

“The Board is thankful for Tyler’s service and leadership,” said NHIA Board Chair Varner Richards, PharmD, Chief Executive Officer, Intramed Plus, Inc. “We are grateful for the important contributions he has made to the association and to the home and specialty infusion community. We’re confident that we will identify a successor to continue to advance the organization to the next level and drive excellent organizational and financial performance.”

“I have enjoyed my three years at NHIA. The association is stronger today with a dedicated Board of Directors and a staff that strives to always protect and promote the interests of the home and specialty infusion community. With recent achievements on Capitol Hill and the addition of new member benefits, NHIA has a great future,” said Wilson.

NHIA is a trade association that represents companies which provide infusion therapy to patients in their homes, as well as companies that manufacture and supply infusion and specialty pharmacy products. Infusion therapy involves patient-specific compounded medications, supplies, and a range of pharmacy, nursing, and other clinical services for delivering care to patients in the home setting.
